

How Consultation Service Providers Help You Transition to CFSS

Community First Services and Supports (CFSS) is replacing the current Personal Care Assistance (PCA) and Consumer Support Grant (CSG) programs. If you're on PCA or CSG, you'll need to transition over to CFSS.

Don't worry—you won't do this transition alone. A consultation service provider will work with you every step of the way.

What are consultation service providers?

Consultation services providers walk you through the transition by helping you write your service delivery plan. They know about different resources and can guide you to the right services for your needs. Under CFSS, your consultation providers will help you create a service plan that fits your budget and meets your needs.

Your consultation provider cannot be your CFSS provider agency or financial management service (FMS). This means you'll have to work with two different providers. One will be your consultation provider, and one will be your CFSS agency provider or FMS.

What's the difference between a service delivery plan and a plan of care?

Your plan of care is now called a service delivery plan. It is a person-centered document that identifies the PCA/CFSS services you will receive. It also bases those services on your assessed needs and how those services will be delivered.

The agency or FMS you choose will help you finalize any specific details in your service delivery plan. Your consultation provider helps you create your service delivery plan.

While you're required to choose a consultation services provider, you decide how much help you need from them.

How to Choose a Consultation Services Provider

First of all, it's important to make sure the consultation provider you choose has a contract with the state to provide consultation services. This means they must be enrolled with MHCP.

The DHS has a list of all consultation services providers in Minnesota. Make sure to only choose providers that are marked yes in the Enrolled column.
